Literaler product mockups for Clay Hearth and Richer Walnut

This round is meant to feel closer to actual Maison product surfaces, not just polished mood boards. The layouts are denser, the information hierarchy is more real, and the dashboards lean harder into what the app would actually need to show day to day.

You were right to call this out.

The earlier rounds were real mockups, but still more conceptual than product-like. This pass makes Clay Hearth and Richer Walnut feel closer to the actual app so you and Riah can judge the colors in a more honest context.

WHY THESE TWO

Clay Hearth has the most soul. Richer Walnut has the strongest bridge between the color system and the future type system.

WHAT TO JUDGE HERE

Not just whether the colors are pretty, but whether the product still feels trustworthy, legible, and worth using every day.

DIRECTION 01

Clay Hearth, higher-fidelity surfaces

This is Maison as a warm, characterful home brand. The risk is heaviness, so the product surfaces have to stay disciplined. In the more literal version, Clay Hearth still feels good, but only if parchment and oat stay dominant and terracotta is used with control.

LANDING PAGE, CLOSER TO PRODUCTION

Maison Home care Pricing Sign in

The home app that actually feels like home.

Maison gives a household one warm place for maintenance, shopping, upkeep, and the small repeating things that usually live in somebody's head until they turn into friction.

Join the founding launch

See a household view

WHY IT LANDS

Domestic, not generic.

The palette makes the product feel like part of the house itself instead of another bright software surface.

Tonight at home — 3 moments

Evening reset
Kitchen close, refill hand soap, prep tomorrow's breakfast basics.

Wipe counters — 8 pm

Swap dish towel — Kitchen

Order coffee beans — List

DASHBOARD, CLOSER TO PRODUCTION

Maison This week Whole home

Your home rhythm looks steady.

The dashboard keeps its warmth, but the informat needs structure. This version is closer to what the app would need to hold.

DUE SOON
4 Things to handle by Sunday

COMPLETED
12 Finished this week

SHOPPING
7 Restocks waiting

PRIORITY FLOW

Kitchen + pantry reset
Replace the water filter, clear produce, and restock two daily staples before the week turns over.

Replace fridge filter
Installed last month, ready to swap now.

Reorder dish soap
Will run out before Tuesday.

Restock breakfast basics

SHOPPIN

Market

Paper towel
Restoc Monda

Coffe beans
Main p shelf

Desig
Best w UI uses like a h

Home memory

Repeating care tasks stop vanishing into mental clutter.

Shared rhythm

Everyone can see what matters next without being micromanaged.

Warm utility

The product feels useful without becoming sterile.

Eggs, yogurt, and coffee are all low.

accent wall-to paint.

Weekend

Bathroom refresh, guest room linens, and vacuum stairs.

Household note

This palette feels branded, but it needs lots of parchment breathing room to stay elegant.

DIRECTION 02

Richer Walnut, higher-fidelity surfaces

This is the same family as the tighter round, but rendered more like a real product. It feels more expensive than Clay Hearth, a little more controlled, and more naturally aligned with the stronger typography direction you're asking for now.

LANDING PAGE, CLOSER TO PRODUCTION

Maison

How Maison works | Launch offer | Sign in

A calmer house starts with a clearer center.

Richer Walnut gives Maison more gravity. It makes the product feel less like an app category play and more like a designed home brand with real taste behind it.

Join Maison

See the dashboard

WHY IT MATTERS

Stronger identity.

This direction feels more like something memorable, and it creates a better bridge into the typography round.

Today at home | Focus view

Saturday household reset

Kitchen upkeep, recurring restocks, and a few finishing touches before the new week starts.

Refill hand soap | Bath

Order pantry staples | List

Swap laundry pods | Utility

More depth | More brand | More type-ready

DASHBOARD, CLOSER TO PRODUCTION

Maison

Tonight | Kitchen

A stronger, more brandec dashboard.

This is the most persuasive version if Maison wants feel premium and distinct, not just warm.

PENDING
3
Tonight

HANDLED
10
This week

SHOPPING
6
Restocks waiting

HOUSEHOLD FLOW

Kitchen close routine

Reset the sink, wipe the stove, refill two essentials, and set tomorrow's breakfast basics so the morning feels easy.

Refill dish soap
Low after this week.

Swap hand towel
Fresh one from the linen drawer.

Order coffee beans
Repeat purchase ready to confirm.

RESTOCK

Pantry

Coffe
Kitche

Hanc
Both b

Reco
If you to feel expen strong

Upcoming

Design read

Feels weightier without going dark.

Looks less replaceable.

Pairs better with the Tailored House direction.

Guest-room linens, pantry wipe-down, and bathroom stock check this weekend.

This is the clearest link between the visual system and the typography system you want next.

READ

What changes after seeing them more literally

CLAY HEARTH

Still beautiful, still soulful, but it needs more restraint to stay trustworthy as a real app. It wants to be a brand accent system more than a full-product blanket.

RICHER WALNUT

Feels stronger in real product context than it did in the looser mockups. It is the better bridge into the typography revisit because it already feels more structured.

MY RECOMMENDATION

If you and Riah want to sit with the colors, these are the two to sit with in real product terms: Clay Hearth for soul, Richer Walnut for branded polish.